Why such a course?

Australia, like much of the world, is at a critical moment in its history.

Of the many challenges that we face none is more important than that of making this society one which values and nurtures its rich cultural and religious diversity.

In this, Australia's Muslim communities, representing one of the world's great religious traditions, have much to contribute. Muslims have been integral to Australia's development since prior to early settlement.

There is a need for Muslim leaders to emerge who can speak clearly and confidently about the various issues which confront not only people of Islamic faith in Australia, but all Australians today, and who can participate fully in shaping Australia's future.

What will this Course do?

- It will empower young Muslim men and women and help them to reach their full potential as citizens and future leaders
- It will develop the skills that young Muslims need to engage confidently and creatively with all levels of government, business, academia, the professional world, the media, and religious and community organisations
- It will give course members the opportunity to meet and talk with decision makers in Canberra, Sydney and Melbourne - this will include visits to the state and federal parliaments, universities, the courts, media networks, churches, temples and synagogues
- It will encourage new thinking about Australia and its place in the world and the contribution Muslims can make to help meet the challenges of the future.

Dates for the Course

Spread over a number of evenings, weekends and weekdays during September-October 2011

The course will be made up of several components, which have been put together, keeping in mind that applicants may be studying or working full time.

Successful applicants will have to pledge full participation in all facets of the programme and will need to make appropriate arrangements with employers, universities or significant others to enable attendance. We can assist with official letters of support to employers and lecturers.
